

Good standards at Chestnut Street

GOOD NEWS: The Ruskington Chestnut Street CofE Primary School have been celebrating after the school was rated as Good in a recent Ofsted inspection. (Photo by Gilly Palmer Photography)

A RUSKINGTON school has been celebrating after being rated as Good by school inspectors.

The Chestnut Street CofE Primary School was visited by Ofsted inspectors at the start of last month who found the school to be achieving Good outcomes in the four key areas.

Headteacher Laura Suffield said: "Our result reflects what a good school Chestnut Street is and the good standards and rates of progress our children achieve.

"We are particularly proud of the fact that pupils' spiritual, moral, social and cultural development was said to be outstanding."

Lead inspector Andrew Read highlighted the above national average standards reached by pupils in English and mathematics and the good behaviour of pupils.

He wrote: "The range of subjects and activities provides positive experiences and rich opportunities for good-quality learning.

"Pupils enjoy coming to school and say that they feel safe and find their lessons exciting and fun.

"The school has a very effective headteacher who has a strong understanding of the strengths of the school."